Extent of the Disease in Effingham and Cumberland Counties, Illinois.

A Better Feeling in Kansas—Outbreaks of the Malady in Missouri and Iowa.

The Subject Formally Discussed in the Senate by Several Western Members.

WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 12.—[Special.]—Although the order is standing for the consideration of the Senate affirming the action of Billings Bros. and Cumberland Counties brought to light pleuro-pneumonia among their cattle, the matter was not brought before the Senate on Thursday and Friday, and it is probable that the Senate will not act. Senator Farwell, of Illinois, has been unable to be present on account of illness, and Senator Logan, who is also suffering from illness, has been absent from the Senate Chamber for several days. Senator Cullom, who has been attending to the matter for the Senators from Illinois, has been unable to be present for the same reason. Senator Allison, who has been attending to the matter for the Senators from Iowa, has been absent from the Senate Chamber for several days, and Senator Harrison, who has been attending to the matter for the Senators from Kansas

RILEY—CULLERTON.

Their Scheme Considered by the Joint Committee of Judiciary and Representatives of Taxes.

Some of It Could Be Fairly Carried Out It Would Result in Benefit to Some Indians.

In the Words of Statement Now It Would Work, Save—It Is the Words of Sing and Valentine!

The Joint Committee of Judiciary and Representatives of Taxes of the County Board met the [illegible] pursuant to assembly the Riley-Cullerton [illegible] to Commissioner-appointed property [illegible] State Street Commissioners Lands, the [illegible] Lake, Northeastern, Kenosha, Racine [illegible] Wisconsin, Fox River, Geneva, and Elgin, of the committee; Commissioners Van Pelt, Schaefer, Layden, Bannigan, Dibble, and Morgan; [illegible] County Attorney Riley, John C. Thompson, George Ellis Hunter, J. C. [illegible] Ira J. Morris, F. G. Barbour, E. S. Smith, Charles H. Aldrich, Mark Bradwell, and E. S. Hunt, of the Citizens' Association; E. C. Sweet and Francis Dunlap, of the Real Estate and Building Agents' Association; Thomas Wash, attorney for Gray & Co.; [illegible] Calhoun, who represented the city interests.

WHAT IS THE LAW?

After the reading of the documents relating to the subject, all of which have been printed in THE TRIBUNE, Commissioner Van Pelt said, as it was the desire of every one to ascertain if the matter contained any thoroughfare, the time was that the first question was to be settled was, "What is the law?" If there was a statute of the State which said certain classes of property should be taxed, and there was not the committee would like to know it. If there was no such law they would like to know it.

Commissioner Schaefer remarked that they should know what were the laws governing the taxation of real and personal property. There was a great many lots on the assessment book regarding the taxing and taking of property and the first question was, what taxes could be legally levied and collected under them, and where, as to the regulations.

County Attorney Riley said both problems were correct, and he knew what legal points they wanted to understand, that they be based upon the necessity of both of the Revised Statutes and decisions of the Supreme Court bearing upon the taxing of railroad property [illegible] State Statutes.

LOCAL LAWS.

Commissioner Schaefer wanted the opinion of Mr. Riley as to whether or not the power of the Legislature to pass local laws was exhausted. Mr. Riley said that the authority to enforce the statutes was not.

Mr. Riley replied that he was willing to give the opinion, but it would be a matter of [illegible] Commissioner Schaefer said that he [illegible] would not have assumed that Mr. Riley would [illegible] the discussion.

Mr. Riley continued: It was a theoretical point, and, therefore, I couldn't be led to act out any more than my answer to the legal [illegible] of the Commissioners.

Commissioner Van Pelt—Then, Mr. Riley, what is the law?

Mr. Riley—I am not prepared to answer that question. I have not examined the statutes with reference to the matter. I have not examined the decisions of the Supreme Court with reference to the matter. I am not prepared to say what is the law.

Commissioner Schaefer—Then, Mr. Riley, what is the use of this committee meeting here? Why should we meet here? Why should we have the benefit of your opinion?

Mr. Riley—I am not aware that I have given any opinion. I have not been asked for an opinion. I have not given an opinion. I am not prepared to give an opinion

How the Prominent Ones in Parliament Look and Talk.

The Debate on the Relics of Cromwell and Its Participants.

General Dissatisfaction with the Policy of the Government Towards Egypt.

LONDON, Feb. 20.—[Special Correspondence.] Westminster, sometimes known as the Queen of Parliaments, is one of the most magnificent buildings in Europe and is the largest public edifice in the world. It covers an area of seven acres, and has a frontage of 1,000 feet. There are within its walls fourteen courts, galleries, and numerous eight others available, seventy-seven clerks and officers, fifteen grand staircases, and an enormous number of rooms, among them, besides those for the accommodation of members, ministers, and other officers, in short, of all of, there are between 500 and 600 dwelling-rooms, eleven which have been assigned for their residence, and an enormous number of bedrooms, kitchens, etc., etc., which are perfect. But only as an expression of an architectural period has this enormous pile of the nineteenth century any claim to be considered worthy. Its site, its cost, its magnificence as a parliamentary palace, its utility perfect. But only as an expression of an architectural period has this enormous pile of the nineteenth century any claim to be considered worthy. The Gothic edifice has supplanted on this site Inigo Jones' Whitehall, and as a civic building it is an enormous success. It lacks of its end. The principal object of the edifice is to provide a building for the habitation of the nation. There are two chambers—the House of Lords and the House of Commons—both of which are small, so small that neither of them is capable of holding the full complement of members on the floor of the hall. The chamber of the Commons is only about three times large enough to hold, and to sitting in shape. Its architectural style is that of a gothic chapel with galleries along the sides these galleries are for the use of such members as are not provided with seats on the floor. This purpose gallery is reserved for the reporters, above this gallery is another, behind a row of window-seats, or other wise seven, which, in the use of ladies. The gallery appears to divided into three compartments, of which the one in the middle is for the use of ladies. The gallery on the left is for the use of the members of the House of Lords, and that on the right for the use of strangers introduced by members of the House of Commons.

AN UNSUITABLE HOUSE.

But I must first say a word about how the House itself has been dealt with. Shortly after the destruction of the old Houses of Parliament by fire, in 1834, it was resolved that the Government should be at once provided with a new building, and a competition of designs was invited. Twenty-two out of the sixty-seven designs sent in were Gothic, and the Government, in accordance with the wishes of the Queen, selected one of these. The work was begun in 1840, and was completed in 1860, at a cost of £2,000,000. Of the architect, Sir Charles Barry, I have already spoken briefly. He was a man of great ability, and his work, though not perfect, is in many respects admirable. Of the interior decorations, Pugin, who was employed by the Oxford Professor's speech in the Commons.

A MIDDLETON'S WIFE.

She Commits an Unjust Act Which Has Involved a Divorce Suit Already Decreed.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 13.—[Special.]—The announcement today that a decree of divorce had been granted to Mrs. Henrietta Cox Richards, the wife of the Rev. Dr. Warren Richards, pastor of one of the wealthiest and most influential Episcopal churches of Brooklyn, has an entire surprise to their many friends in this city on account of the social prominence connected with the proceedings appears to have been maintained. The fact that the divorce was obtained in this city instead of in Brooklyn, where the residence of the parties is situated, is due to the fact that the defendant was served with the subpoena while he was passing through this city on his way to Boston. Mrs. Richards, who is a daughter of the late Dr. Warren Cox, a well-known physician of this city, and a granddaughter of Bishop Cox, of Western New York, was married to Dr. Richards in 1870, and has always been considered a most estimable lady. Dr. Richards is a native of Brooklyn, and has been connected with the Church of the Holy Trinity, of that city, for the past twenty years. He is a graduate of Columbia College, and of the General Theological Seminary of New York. He is a member of the Union League Club of Brooklyn, and is also connected with many other social organizations. He is a man of fine appearance, and is very popular in the circles in which he moves. He is the author of several works, among which are "Sermons for the Christian Year," "Sermons for Children," and "Sermons for Special Occasions." He is also the author of a number of articles which have appeared in the Church Review and the Church Journal. The action of Mrs. Richards in obtaining a divorce from her husband has created a profound sensation among her friends, and the cause which led to the step is a matter of much speculation. Mrs. Richards has not yet given any reason for her action, and her friends are unable to account for it. Dr. Richards has been in Boston for the past few days, and has not yet returned to this city. It is said that he will not contest the suit, and that the decree will be granted at once. Mrs. Richards has been a prominent worker in the Church of the Holy Trinity, and is a member of the Board of Managers of the Church Home for Children, which is under the charge of the Sisters of St. Mary. She is also a member of the Board of Managers of the Church Home for Children, which is under the charge of the Sisters of St. Mary. Harmonious Workings of the Democratic and Anti-Legion Alliance—Residence Abed.

Quite Hot Bill Looking After His Chances for the Attorney-Generalship.

The Conclusions to the Fourth Ohoice Made to Suit Way to Be Select.

[SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE TRIBUNE.]

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 12.—The Democratic and Anti-Legion alliance which exists between the Democrats and Anti-Legion Republicans in Cook County seems to have developed an unexpected strength. The Democrats of Chicago who are seeking the nomination of the attorneys, the anti-Legion Republicans have entered the contest, but they belong to a good many of such shooting when the conventions assemble, but they expect to be accomplished. Just how strong it is to those who have been in the habit of watching the political pulse of Cook County cannot be said, but the alliance has not only carried beyond the primary stage, however, but it has taken part in the deliberations of the conventions. THE VIRGINIA HORROR.

The Mine on Fire and Burning Furiously—The Entrance Sealed and Explosives Impossible.

Another Explosion Probable—Cause of the Accident—Relief for the Suffering Widows of the Dead.

Fayetteville, Va., March 12.—[Special.]—All news received from Pocahontas this evening portrays the situation there as growing in the worse. The investigation of matters this week in the vicinity where the explosion occurred has compelled Superintendent Thompson, Governor, and engineer, all of whom are hopefully united as to the mine which has been sealed, and there is no reason at present for any of the workmen of the victims being recovered. The mine is on fire and burning furiously, and it is hourly growing fierce.

It there is any consolation to be derived from the condition of affairs it is that a majority of those who perished were unmarried, so that the most sad sorrow at least will not be an enhancement to any of their surviving. They almost invariably had families. The miners were very young men.

The mining superintendent on duty, Mr. Gardner, who has been in the mine, but others are arriving, and it is feared that he has not much time to live.

This evening supplies are on the way, and one has it is the main duration of the fire that have ever seen. The Wells Fire of Boone, who came with a party of miners from Chesterfield County to render assistance, never spoke to sight, as nothing can be done, the mine will have to remain closed for months.

Crowds have been allowed around the entrance to the mine, as it is feared that another explosion may occur.

In this connection it should be stated that the owners of the suffering mine, the Pocahontas Coal Company, offers to do nothing whatever for their poor unfortunate victims, and it is only through the generosity of the Virginia Coal and Iron Company that the widows and orphans will be provided for.

RELIEF ON THE WAY.

Philadelphia, Va., March 12.—[By Mail.]—The Board of the Pocahontas Coal Company, owners of the mine at Pocahontas, Va., received yesterday afternoon the following telegram from Governor Lee, of Virginia, dated Richmond, March 11: "Have just received the following telegram from Governor Fleming, of West Virginia: 'Have just received the following telegram from Governor Fleming, of West Virginia: 'Have just received the following telegram from Governor Fleming, of West Virginia: '

Recent Fiction.

Mr. George Parsons Lathrop has successfully adapted the short and epochal of modern life as portrayed in his novel of that name. It is the familiar experience of standing during their boarding hours, girls and ladies, from bustling. Into this environment Mr. Lathrop introduces two or three love affairs of a pivotal character, of which the main ones ends tragically. The story is chiefly devoted to our social evidence of that element of society which ignorant to such a misfortune—the unprincipled, the pretentious, and people who fashionable have been treated to amusement." The story, like the life it portrays, exhibits dramatic faithfulness towards those, whose "slender purses enable them only to cling to the edge of the circle and not to be a guiding factor that does not rule," and there "are of the governing social temper ... numbers of unfashionable appointments, habits of their opening fortunes, who grow old in the others from a native humbleness of spirituality, or a vague, and appear to be taking the opportunity with a good deal of philosophic ease of mind and reasonable temper." A light and pleasant vein of satire runs through the book, pleasantly illustrating qualities for "Prudence by the Department of Business," and "society gathered together, for self-improvement, that is, how devoted an hour to literature and got into a state of mind to enjoy it." At the end of the story Mr. Rogers tells his version of the latest and most important application," and the end of the story that makes him for the modest unassuming at the court of Elizabeth, where the pioneering genius found out the medical fact of quality, her good deep daughter of writing from grand Regent. (Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.25.)

"Mavis," a story by Miss Grace Denison Eaton, is crowded with remarkable episodes of life among the dwellers of those primeval regions are given to full, and who "keep every outward ground together in the general light of a Northern progress." There is a hero found by a shipwreck, a mysterious occupant, an African witch, a village quarrel, a white man's savage, and a great deal of good old-fashioned, "Colonel Mrs. Eaton's book is a useful one. (Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.25.)

"Stephen," by Miss Ruth Hargous, Mrs. Frances Lee's novel, "Stephen," is among the most thoughtful of this season's books. It is the history of a young man's life, from boyhood to manhood, and the influences which shape his character. Stephen is a child of nature, and his mother, a widow, is a woman of rare intellectual and moral qualities. Her husband's death, which occurs when Stephen is a boy, is the first great sorrow of the child's life, and the influence of his mother's character upon him is the most beautiful thing in the book. Stephen's boyhood is passed in the country, and his mother's influence is the only one that he feels. Her death, which occurs when he is about fifteen years old, is the first great sorrow of his life, and the influence of his mother's character upon him is the most beautiful thing in the book. (Roberts Brothers. $1.)

"Some Observers," by Miss Mary Agnes Tincker, is a collection of short stories, which appeared originally in the Atlantic Monthly, Scribner's Monthly, and other periodicals. They are all of a light character, and are well told. The first story, "Some Observers," is the best of the collection. It is the story of a young man who comes to New York to study art, and his experiences in the city. The second story, "The Old Lady Mary," is a pathetic tale of a poor old woman who lives in a garret and supports herself by selling flowers. The third story, "Dumbo Ben-Ahab," is a humorous sketch of a negro preacher. The fourth story, "The Lady Mary," is a pathetic tale of a poor old woman who lives in a garret and supports herself by selling flowers. The fifth story, "The Old Lady Mary," is a pathetic tale of a poor old woman who lives in a garret and supports herself by selling flowers. (Roberts Brothers. $1.)

"A Great Silence," by Miss Evelyn Everett-Green, is a story of the time of the Crusades. The hero is a young knight, who goes to the Holy Land to fight the Saracens. He is captured and taken to a dungeon, where he remains for many years. He is finally released, and returns to his native land, where he finds that his wife has died, and his children have grown up. The story is told in a very interesting manner, and the characters are well drawn. (Roberts Brothers. $1.)

Dr. Bennett's "Words of Christ."—"Jesus The Jew."—"Saint Francis of Assisi and Another."

Dr. Bennett's "Words of Christ" is a book of a peculiar kind, and will be read with interest by all who are interested in the study of the life of Christ. It is a collection of the words of Christ, as recorded in the four Gospels, and is arranged in the order of the events in which they occurred. The book is a valuable one for those who wish to study the life of Christ in this way. (Roberts Brothers. $1.)

Working Capacity of Draught Horses.

It would be hard to find a community with that those horses which are raised on the soil will have fewer and fewer days of work to do, and will yield less and less profit. Not only will this be true of horses which are used for the purposes of pleasure, but it will be true of those which are employed in the transportation of the products of the soil. Every year the railroads are being extended into new districts, and every year the cost of carrying farm products to market is reduced. The result is that the farmer is compelled to produce more and more with the same amount of labor, or else he must be content with smaller profits. Every year, therefore, he is compelled to look more and more to the raising of horses on the farm and to the consumption of the Farm, where steam-traction has been introduced to their utmost extent. The power of horse and the place certainly will soon approach nearly that the horse of those regions is the most valuable and most profitable to breed and raise and have ready for sale. The object will be found in the greater strength that the horse of the western districts and of the Mississippi Valley. The success and the security of the saving that crop of the plains is to consist in growing cattle to the fattening point, and then shipping them to the east. Keeping cattle on grass, the crop is supposed to carry a quality of nutritious grass, and on top of that a crop of corn to the bushel. Then, with cattle, sheep and hogs, and also dairy products, the farmer will be independent of the world. Every bushel of corn that he raises will be worth a dollar, and he
